HISTORIANS HAVE FOUND THAT IRON WAS BEING PRODUCED IN TUNSTALL AS FAR BACK AS 1280. TUNSTALL STANDS ON A RIDGE SURROUNDED BY OLD TILEMAKING AND BRICKMAKING SITES, SOME OF WHICH PROBABLY DATE BACK TO THE LATE MIDDLE AGES.

GOLDEN
(THE FLAME THAT NEVER DIES)

SCULPTOR: WOLFGANG BUTTRESS

The title references the golden flame that sprang from the original Goldendale ironworks which previously lit the Chatterley Valley – locals for many years referred to the iron works as “the flame that never dies”.

The new, elegant artwork stands at 20 metres tall. The piece is made from corten steel which alludes to the steel previously manufactured in the area. Over 1,000 hand blown glass prisms are attached to the column of the artwork. Each one contains a memory or wish written on handmade paper by hundreds of people in the local community. The sculpture will be internally lit so that it appears to glow at night. Lines and marks engraved on to the column have been informed and inspired by the Sutherland Map which is located in the Potteries Museum & Art Gallery. The map clearly shows the layers of geological strata that make up the Chatterley Valley. On a site visit the artist found a piece of iron from the old works which has a remarkable resemblance to a human heart. This has been suspended in the interior of the artwork to represent the beating heart of the community.

POTTERIES PYRAMID

SCULPTOR: ONDRE NOWAKOWSKI

A ten metre tall, stainless steel pyramid with the image of a bottle oven kiln subtly worked into the sides. The sculpture is a strikingly hard-edged modern statement whilst at the same time acknowledging and celebrating the city's industrial past.

AFLOAT

SCULPTOR: MARTIN HERON

Stainless steel sculpture created for the Westport Lake nature reserve. Designed in consultation with local people, the artwork is designed in response to the site which is the largest body of water in the city with a woodland conservation area and wildflower meadow.

LOCATION

Westport Lake, Westport Lake Road,
Longport, Stoke-on-Trent, ST6 4RZ

TUNSTALL SHARD

SCULPTOR: ROBERT ERSKINE

This sculpture is inspired by a shard of pottery from Roman times that was found in an underground oven when the former Wedgwood pottery site in the city was being redeveloped. Reflecting the city's ongoing reputation as The Potteries the artwork is 300 times larger than the shard it is based upon. It shows the fingerprint that was found on the original piece of Roman pottery which is thought to date back hundreds of years.

Tunstall Shard stands 35ft high by 27ft wide and weighs 7.5 tons.

An inscription on the south side reads: ‘They died that others might live’ and a further inscription on another side reads: ‘Burslem’s memorial to her heroic sons. 1914 - 1918. 1939 - 1945’.

LOCATION

Swan Square, Burslem, Stoke-on-Trent, ST6 2AE

ROY SPROSON

SCULPTOR: MICHAEL TALBOT

Roy Sproson spent his entire professional career at Port Vale amassing a club record 837 appearances between 1950 and 1972. The statue was unveiled on 17 November 2012 as a result of nearly a decade of fundraising from fans.

ANGEL OF VICTORY

SCULPTOR: G. T. ROBINSON

This life size gilded copper angel holding a laurel wreath stands on top of the old Town Hall in Burslem.

The angel was immortalised by Arnold Bennett in his books ‘Clayhanger’ and ‘The Old Wives Tale’ where Burslem is thinly disguised as Bursley.

The Angel is also rumoured to have been the inspiration for Robbie Williams’ hit song, Angels, in 1997.

SIR HENRY DOULTON 1820-1897

SCULPTOR: COLIN MELBOURNE

Sir Henry Doulton was a pottery manufacturer and one of the key members of the Doulton family who developed the Royal Doulton pottery firm.

The statue depicts Sir Henry Doulton wearing formal Victorian dress; his left hand holds his top hat, his right hand his umbrella, and he wears a flower in his button hole. The pedestal with its chamfered stones is quite unusual.

THE SPIRIT OF FIRE

SCULPTOR: DAVID WYNNE

Nicknamed as Jack Frost, this spikey metal sculpture of a man symbolises the fires that fuelled the city's main industries of ceramics, mining and steelworks. The sculptor spent some time in Stoke-on-Trent looking for inspiration and he said "...it hit me that the sculpture must have something to do with the great fires which dominated the life of the city".

WAR MEMORIAL

SCULPTOR: HAROLD BROWNSWORD

The snake beneath Victory's feet alludes to the defeat of evil, in this case by force of arms (the sword in her right hand). The wreath is another signifier of Victory, while the lion on the female figure's helmet and the two Tudor roses either side of the Stoke-on-Trent coat of arms symbolise the English nation.

To our valiant dead 1914 -1918. 1939 -1945' and 'They died for our freedom'.

LOCATION

16

MOTHER AND CHILD

SCULPTOR: ANTHONY BEETLESTONE

The sculpture signifies the motif of rebirth and new life, representing an optimistic image, whilst reflecting the regeneration and hopes of the area.

This figurative stone sculpture forms the centrepiece to Bethesda Gardens and was created by the sculptor with the help of youngsters from St Luke's Primary School and the Friends of Bethesda Chapel.

LOCATION

17

INDUSTRIES OF THE POTTERIES

SCULPTOR: G H DOWNING DESIGNER: FRANK MURRIER

Made from over 6,000 shaped bricks, this long relief depicts images of the history and industries of the Stoke-on-Trent area.

The images include a working mine with miners and pithead, and a pottery with kilns and potters at work. Transport is also included with a horse and cart carrying coal, and several canal boats in dock. The centre of the relief has a large motif that is formed by half a cartwheel, and a radiating circle of hands.

LOCATION

18

LIGHT OF THE CITY

SCULPTOR: DAVID ANNAND

This sculpture celebrates the centenary of the federation of the six towns that make up Stoke-on-Trent. The female figure holds a vessel that represents the Staffordshire Hoard, the most valuable collection of Anglo-Saxon gold ever found, and the male figure holds a plate which reflects the city's ceramic heritage. The names of the six towns that came together to form the city of Stoke-on-Trent are on the plinth that the two figures are standing on.

R. J. MITCHELL

SCULPTOR: COLIN MELBOURNE

Reginald Mitchell was born near Stoke-on-Trent and was an aeronautical engineer and aircraft designer who was most famous for the legendary Spitfire fighter plane. Sadly he died in 1937 so did not live to see the success of the Spitfire in World War Two.

The statue depicts Mitchell wearing a suit, pen in his right hand, book in his left. The low relief panel attached to the pedestal depicts two more images of Mitchell and above the two portrait images is a depiction of the Spitfire he designed. Inside The Potteries Museum & Art Gallery you can see an example of a Mark XV1 Spitfire.

THE STAFFORDSHIRE SAXON

SCULPTOR: ANDY EDWARDS

Inspired by the Staffordshire Hoard, a treasure trove of Anglo-Saxon gold, this towering 9ft warrior is adorned with items reproduced from this amazing dark age collection. He brings to life intricately designed gold sword pommels, helmet fragments and knife fittings by showing how a 7th century battle clad warrior would have looked wearing them.

Part of the Staffordshire Hoard is permanently on display inside the Potteries Museum & Art Gallery.

JOSHIAH WEDGWOOD

SCULPTOR: VINCENT WOROPAY

This is the head of Josiah Wedgwood carved out of large red bricks, made in 1986 for the National Garden Festival, Stoke-on-Trent. In 2009 the statue was moved to near the site of Josiah Wedgwood's home, Etruria Hall, now part of a hotel, and it is also close to where he built his Etruria factory in 1769.

LOCATION

22

MAN OF STEEL

SCULPTOR: COLIN MELBOURNE

This sculpture of a steelworker illustrates the struggle of the Shelton Bar steelworkers to retain their livelihood and preserve the future of their works. Unfortunately they lost their fight and after more than 100 years of continuous operation the blast furnaces were shut down on 23 June 1978 and 2,000 workers were made redundant. Rolling works continued at the works but the whole works were closed in April 2000.

UNEARTHED (LIDICE)

SCULPTORS: DASHYLINE

The Czech village of Lidice was destroyed by the Nazi's in 1942 in retaliation for the assassination of Nazi Lieutenant General and Deputy Reich Protector of Bohemia and Moravia Reinhard Heydrich. Hundreds of men, women and children died.

The massacre inspired Stoke-on-Trent city councillor Barnett Stross to raise funds, along with local coal miners, for the rebuilding of the village. Lidice was eventually rebuilt and the sculpture is dedicated to unearthing the story of Stoke-on-Trent's unique relationship with the village. Miners tags cover the artwork each one stamped with a code identifying a member of the public who has promised to share the story of Lidice with two other people.

LOCATION

LOVE TIES

SCULPTOR: EMILY CAMPBELL

Love Ties was created after the artist worked with local people in a series of workshops to uncover their love letters. Using the community's words, brushed stainless steel quotes can be seen on the island in the boating lake and on the stairs leading from the lake.

LOCATION

Hanley Park, College Road, Stoke-on-Trent, ST1 4DX

LANCE-SERGEANT JOHN DANIEL BASKEYFIELD VC

SCULPTOR: MICHAEL TALBOT

Born in Burslem in 1922, Lance-Sergeant John Daniel Baskeyfield VC was recipient of the Victoria Cross. After being called up to the army in 1942, he served with the South Staffordshire Regiment, fought and died in the subsequent Battle of Arnhem in 1944, aged 21. The sculpture features Sergeant Baskeyfield in World War II uniform loading a cannon shell. He wears battle kit, including a helmet camouflaged with leaves, and has the stripes of a sergeant on his left sleeve. The sculpture conveys the strength and determination of those struggling amidst the adversity of war.

PRIVILEGE

SCULPTOR: DENIS O'CONNOR

A sculpture which reflects the local area's past achievements and future aspirations. The pots and gear wheel represent the pottery and steelmaking industry which used to be nearby and the tree and ladder signify growth and development. Nine metres in scale and fabricated in stainless steel it's seen by over 30,000 motorists every day and has become a central landmark for the city.

RIBBONS OF LIGHT

SCULPTOR: LIZ LEMON

This stainless steel relief extends along the northern and southern sides of the A500 under Glebe Street Bridge. The strands are like that of threads or ribbons which will gather, knot and weave together under the bridge and then unravel again into singular strands. It is perhaps indicative of individual journeys which gather at important points and then move on again. The emblematic 'Staffordshire Knot' is re-interpreted.

SIR STANLEY MATTHEWS

SCULPTORS: JULIAN JEFFERY, CARL PAYNE, ANDY EDWARDS

The three nine-foot statues were made by local artists, showing Sir Stanley at different stages of his football career, which spanned more than 30 years. The location of the statue is Stoke City FC's home, the Britannia Stadium but it points towards the club's old Victoria Ground where Sir Stanley used to play. The statues themselves were fashioned from local clay before being cast. The creation of the statues took a whole year to complete. Carl Payne, one of the sculptors, refers to the work as the evolution of Sir Stanley as the 'Wizard Of Dribble.' He said "Historically it is absolutely correct. People who knew Stan donated his old football boots so we could get it authentic – right down to the last eyelet. All the balls are in the right era and the strip, even the rope around the shorts of Sir Stan when he was a young lad making his debut for Stoke.

LONGTON IN THE SOUTH OF STOKE-ON-TRENT USED TO BE KNOWN LOCALLY AS THE “NECK END” OF THE CITY. LOCALS WERE AFFECTIONATELY KNOWN AS “NECK ENDERS” AND HAD A LONG HISTORY OF WORKING IN THE HEART OF THE POTTERY MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY. THE HISTORY OF CERAMICS PRODUCTION IN LONGTON CAN STILL BE EXPLORED AT THE FABULOUS GLADSTONE POTTERY MUSEUM.

ZOOMORPHIC MOUNT

MADE BY: ARTWORKS: PHIL BROWN (PROJECT MANAGER), JAK FORESTER AND DAN CUTTER

This mount is inspired by a gold artefact from The Staffordshire Hoard and depicts two views of a fish eagle holding a salmon. The original piece, badly damaged when discovered after being buried for around 1400 years was likely to have been mounted on the shield of an Anglo-Saxon warrior.
